Teachers' Notes

Handwriting F-2 is designed to help early learners develop excellent handwriting skills. The activity sheets encourage students to form neat and regular letters. The first pages deal with lower case letters, paired in similar formation. Dotted third lines have been provided and students are asked to trace the letters with their finger before using a pencil. Students should start at the dot, follow the arrows and finish at the cross. All exercises use the Modern Cursive font and the worksheets encourage appropriate spacing of words.

Students will use picture clues and make flip books to consolidate their learning. When making flip books, they are required to cut along the dashed lines then staple their sheets of paper together at the left hand side so that it can be flipped. Flip books can be stuck into a workbook, read to a friend or taken home to read for homework.

Optional: collect all the lower case flip book pages (pages 11, 15, 19, 22, 25) and set students the task of creating a giant flip book that is sequenced from a-z.*

Pages 28-32 cover the formation of upper case letters. Upper case letters are also known as capital letters. Children usually learn upper case letters once they have mastered lower case formation. Children should be familiar with upper case letters and be able to recognise them before they begin these worksheets. Upper case activities that follow teach when to use capital letters.

Pages 38-43 introduce punctuation. These activities can be used to teach full stops, commas, apostrophes, question marks, exclamation marks and speech marks. The activities on pages 44-49 teach basic sentence structure by emphasising the correct use of capital letters and full stops and by giving the students opportunities to create their own sentences. Flip book activities are provided on pages 50-55 to teach word families/building.

Teachers can photocopy and enlarge A4 templates to fit onto A3 size paper to assist children who have visual and fine motor difficulties.

Handwriting lessons in Junior Primary should be included as a daily activity in the classroom. 10-15 minutes each day will help students practise letter formation and develop the correct pencil grip.

Six Tips For Writing (See page 7)

1. Encourage students to keep their feet flat on the floor. This will help the straight alignment of the spine. Check that each student's chair and desk is suitable for their height.
2. Make students aware of their posture, and most importantly encourage them to keep their back straight. No slouching!
3. Prepare to write. Tell students to turn the paper or exercise book at a slight angle.
4. Demonstrate each position for left-handed and right-handed writers by showing where the 'helping hand' should rest. The helping hand (non-writing hand) should rest at the top corner.
5. Demonstrate tripod and quadropod grip for left handed and right handed writers. Learning the correct pencil grip is very important.
6. Encourage students to keep their eyes over their work. Letter formation requires fine motor skills and attention to detail.
